Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Gardener's Monthly and Horticulturist, Vol. 27: Devoted to Horticulture, Arboriculture and Rural Affairs; 1885 One of our nurserymen recently complained to the writer, of those people who continually wrote to his firm for advice. Please send me -, and at the same time tell me how to treat them, is a sample of numerous requests. The profit on the whole transaction might be but a dollar or two. Only for the request, the order would be turned over to the proper clerk, and the proprietor could turn his attention to profitable work. But a clerk cannot answer such a letter. The proprietor must do it himself if it is done at all. He is a little nettled at the demand on his time which really renders the order valueless; but he remembers the business maxim that civility always pays in the end, and with the mental wish that the old fellow had sent his query to the Editor of the Gardener's Monthly instead of imposing on him, he sits down to his half-hour...
