Brand New Book  Print on Demand .SWANS OF BIRCH HARBOR A girl born and raised in the resort town of Birch Harbor is affectionately called a Swan . It is distressful to suggest there is a killer among the lovely, lissome creatures. One swan, Jolais, has an affinity for gypsies, wearing clothes in circus background colors, happy to clash. She desires a man in her galaxy who will bring her flowers, discuss isms for hours and cause her to sing in the shower. They ll have toothpaste kisses in the morning, display their fangs at night. Brynne is a fluttering butterfly in a bay window, flowing white curtains dance about her white pajamas. A man, across the way, asks quot;May I take a picture of you?quot; She smiles, quot;In my pajamas? I look like an asylum inmate.quot; quot;No, you look terrific.quot; He swung the camera towards her, an aura of provocative innocence about her. He felt a rush. Burgundy wore white, her dog is black, named Bourbon. They jogged along the shore. The run, not for exercise, an ample four hour dose will be forthcoming later in the morning. She, a tennis instructor, he retrieves the balls. Their dawn mission is teaching seagulls, two miles away on the sand, who owns the beach. The girl and her dog reach the waterfront. Something is amiss, no seagulls on the beach to chase off. The swan sits on a bench. Her black Labrador has his eyes on a pretty Lab a few benches away next to a man. She said quot;Bourbon, you know how to pick them.quot; She heard the man, quot;Bourbon, her name is Aida, after Verdi,s Egyptian Queen, tell your lovely...
